Government Training Institute Relocates and Expands in South Carolina

New GTI facility will bring approximately 15 jobs and more than 3,000 visitors and related revenues into the Southern Carolina region as first responders attend GTI law enforcement and military personnel training programs at two regional sites.

DENMARK, SOUTH CAROLINA -- Government Training Institute, Inc., a leading military and law enforcement training organization for first responders, has selected South Carolina to be the new home of its corporate headquarters and advanced tactical operations training facility currently located in Idaho. The relocation will bring approximately 15 jobs, $2 million in capital investment, and more than 3,000 visitors to the area annually.

“GTI is a top-notch organization, and we are thrilled that they have chosen our region for their headquarters and training facility,” said SouthernCarolina Alliance President Danny Black. “With its law enforcement and military characteristic, the GTI project is a great example of the diverse types of industry located in our area.”

Black added, “SouthernCarolina Alliance is especially delighted that GTI will bring hundreds of first responders, some of our country’s most outstanding citizens, into the region on a regular basis.”

GTI will locate its headquarters in a 195,000 square foot facility, formerly owned by NIBCO, in Bamberg County. The company will also locate training facilities and operations at a site located in the S.C. Advanced Technology Park in Barnwell County.

“We were careful to select a location where we could consolidate our training operations, expand our curriculum and improve our efficiencies,” said GTI President Chadd Harbaugh. “The Southern Carolina region became the obvious choice in terms of selecting a location that is conducive to partnerships with other organizations in order to assure that our country’s military, law enforcement and first responders all well prepared to attack challenges regarding homeland security with knowledge and confidence.”

According to Bamberg County Council Chairman Chris Wilson, “This is the type of project that will not only create jobs in the region, but will also help stimulate the local economy through the military and law enforcement individuals visiting our area during month-long training courses. We welcome GTI, their staff, and their trainees to Bamberg County and stand ready to assist them any way that we can.”

Lowell Jowers, Chairman of Barnwell County Council, added, “GTI will be a welcome addition to our regional community, and we look forward to having their training operations conducted at our Advanced Technology Park in Barnwell County.”

An announcement ceremony and training course observation are planned for late July. For more information, please contact Kay Maxwell at 803.541.0023.

About Government Training Institute

The Government Training Institute (GTI) was founded in 2003 to address needs of state and local law enforcement agencies throughout the United States with research based training. Currently, over 30 different courses contain a cooperative curriculum base and ongoing research from the staff of GTI with 400 years of operational military and law enforcement experience. The Mission of GTI has expanded to include specialized training in the fields of Special Weapons and Tactics, anti-terrorism and terrorism countermeasures, police sniper operations, specialized patrol curriculum for high risk policing activities, uniformed and undercover narcotics, and a host of other Law Enforcement and Military topics relevant to the Post 911 world
